ABSTRACT

A sixteen line poem in Spanish provides the text of this short booklet on the three meals of the day. Designed for use as supplementary reading materials for the elementary grade Spanish speaking child, the booklet was developed by students in the Bilingual Teacher Aide Program at Mesa Community College. Content and language have been controlled to provide linguistically and culturally sensitive material relevant to the experience of the Chicano child of the Southwest. Large, black and white illustrations accompany the text, which centers around Panchito and the three meals he eats one day. For breakfast he may have orange and apple juice, eggs with sausage, grapes, bananas, and toast with butter and jam. Lunch time brings various salads, tacos and enchiladas. At dinner Pancho has fruit, cantaloupe, watermelon, tortillas, beans, tostadas, and taquitos. (DS)

These materials were developed by the students in our Bilingual Teacher Aide Program, as an integral part of their coursework. They are supplementary reading materials for use by the Spanish speaking children in our elementary schools.

It is our hope that these books will be of high interest and encourage the Spanish speaking child to read. Both language and content have been controlled to provide linguistically and culturally sensitive material relevant to the experience of the Chicano child of the southwest.

LAS TRES COMIDAS DEL DÍA

Son las siete y media, tiempo para el desayuno,
Suena la campana y salen uno por uno.
Todos con sonrisa y bien peinaditos,
-Tenemos mucha hambre, apúrate Panchito.-

Jugo de naranja, jugo de manzana,
Huevos con chorizo, y uvas y bananas.
Mantequilla y jalea en un pan tostado,
Mira el Panchito todavía está acostado.

Son las doce en punto, tiempo para el almuerzo,
A Panchito, el ratoncito, le gusta mucho el queso.
La mesa está llena de varias ensaladas,
Y a Panchito le encantan los tacos y las enchiladas.

La cena es la última comida del día,
Comemos mucha fruta, melones y sandía.
Tortillas y frijoles, tostadas y taquitos,
-¡Ay qué hambre tengo! Apúrate Panchito!-
